

SIX KILLED, FIFTY INJURED IN RIOTS

MARINE COMMANDER DIES

GENERAL NEVILLE, FAMED SOLDIER, IS PARALYSIS VICTIM

General Fuller Is Appointed Acting Commander

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Marines, the navy and army, today were mourning the passing of Major General Wendell C. Neville, commander of the Marine Corps, who died late yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Vest, at Edgewater Beach, near Baltimore. General Neville died following a stroke of paralysis. He was 60 years old, and had been in service ever since graduating from Annapolis in 1892.

He had been named commandant of the "leathernecks," since February 1929, when Major General John LeJeune retired.

As soon as news of the old warrior's death was received at the navy department, Assistant Secretary Jahncke named Brigadier General Ben Fuller, as acting commandant.

General Neville was not "swivel chair" soldier, but won promotion on the field of battle, first coming to prominence during the Spanish War, at the battle of Guantanamo Bay, Cuba in 1898. He saw service in China during the Boxer revolution and soon after was named governor of the Philippine province of Basilan.

He was at Vera Cruz in Wilson's time, and during the World War earned the sobriquet of "follow me." As a colonel of the fifth regiment he served in the Verdun sector and was in the thick of battle at Belleau Wood. It was after this bloody fight that he was promoted to brigadier general, and next commanded the fourth brigade at Soissons, St. Mihiel, Champagne, and in the Meuse Argonne. He marched the fourth brigade into Germany after the armistice, and returned to the States laden with medals and decorations. He was made a major general in 1923.

SEVENTH KILLED IN DETROIT GANG WAR;
HOTEL MAN VICTIM

Underworld Guns Take Heavy Toll In Six Days

DETROIT, July 9.—A slaying in the Ocean View Yacht Club, which, police say, is a "blind pig," today brought the underworld murder toll for the last six days to a total of seven persons.

A man, who has been identified as Louis Candea, manager of the Tremont Hotel here, was shot and killed in the yacht club early today and John Delford, alleged operator of the fashionably furnished "blind pig," was shot in the hand trying to prevent the slaying.

Candea was drinking at the bar when a stranger entered. The gunman drew two guns and put the hotel manager "on the spot." He made good an escape.

The epidemic of gangster murders started last Thursday night when William Cannon and George Collins, "small-time" Chicago racketeers, were shot and killed as they sat in an automobile in front of a local hotel.

Patrolman Barney Roth and John Melz, the latter a bootlegger, were "put on the spot" two days later when two unknown gunmen invaded Roth's home at Hamtramck and shot and killed both of them.

Climax of the murders was the dual slaying of Joseph and Samuel Gaglio, brothers, and alleged bootleggers, whose lives were snuffed out by the bullets from a sub-machine gun as they were putting air into the tires of their automobile in front of a filling station.

The Bay View Club is on the waterfront at Ecorse, a Detroit suburb and purported center of liquor running activities from Canada.

All of the murders have baffled police.

FOREMAN DIES IN RESCUE ATTEMPT

NEW YORK, July 9.—A heroic young "mucker fireman" lost his life early today saving his men in the collapse of a water duct shaft-way 750 feet underground.

Eleven of the men were injured, but twenty-eight escaped unscathed.

Michael Kelly, 27, the newly promoted "walking boss," was crushed under a half ton boulder as he shoved and hurried his men out of the collapsing tunnel, which is being built to pipe water under the East River to Queens.

Famed Contralto, Nearing Seventy, Would Pass On With Song On Her Lips

NEW YORK, July 9.—The great blaze of lights went dim. A death-like hush fell upon the shadowy sea of upturned faces. There was that tense pause that precedes a heralded occasion. Then a motherly, full-figured woman, silver-haired and smiling, stepped out upon the vast stage. A strangely homey figure for this dazzling world of colored lights and velvet drapes.

Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, the Grand Old Lady of Song, was celebrating her sixty-ninth birthday. And she had elected to celebrate it by pouring forth her great contralto voice into a world where it had never been heard before—the world of the shadowy drama.

The Old Magic
Sixty-nine years after little Ernestine, daughter of Hans and Charlotte Roessler, had been born in Lieben, Prague, she took up for perhaps the ten-thousandth time the familiar position beside her piano. A few short chords. Then there occurred one of the phenomena of musical history. From the full-throated figure came those magical caressing tones of the mother, singing to her little one. It was still Schumann-Heink!

We crowded into the tiny lift that was to whirl the almost septuagenarian contralto from the stage level to the broadcasting studio high up in the vast cinema cathedral. It had been the smiling old lady's second "personal appearance" that day. There was to be still another before the day was done. Yet now—between her platform appearances—the grand old lady was to sing to the thousands who waited beside their radios from coast to coast.

MME.

I crowded close to the pink-cheeked grandmother whose eyes were dancing with the excitement of a child. It had been a great experience—this hearing one of the world's golden voices in what was virtually a Golden Jubilee. My admiration brought a droll shrug of the shoulders, a slight twinkle of the eyes.

"Flatterer!" she said unceremoniously.

It seemed a breathless sort of existence for an ageing woman whose strenuous life, packed with drama, had earned for her a quiet home with children and grandchildren to make her happy. It seemed an excellent moment to probe for that mysterious force that on rare occasions seems to feed the fire of genius in defiance of age itself.

"You will continue to sing for many years," I said half questioningly, half prophetically.

She looked thoughtfully into my eyes. The smile was gone. There was a faintly wistful expression that seemed to plead for fulfillment.

"If God wills it," she said in a half-whisper.

Peasants, millionaires, kings and queens have told this woman that she gave them happiness. She has known all the joys and some of the tragedies of motherhood. She has tasted fame and the great moments of human existence. There is but one more gift that she asks from Life.

One Wish
Ernestine Schumann-Heink asks fervently—so fervently—that she be permitted to sing her way out of life as she has sung through it. More than anything else she hopes that she may finish the role that she has played through more than a half a century of the world's eternal harmonies.

It is that same unquenchable fire, blazing its fifty-year-old will that will lead the way to the grand final. For Schumann-Heink must live and die with a song on her lips.

Claims Kinsley Is Not
man

WASHINGTON, July 9.—What political Washington now humorously terms "the strange case of Claudius Houston" became even more complicated today when the White House was impelled to issue an official denial that the chairmanship of the Republican national committee had been offered to Earl S. Kinsley, the member from Vermont.

Kinsley was represented in his Vermont home as having been offered the chairmanship by President Hoover, but the White House issued a pithy little statement of ten words, as follows:

"The president has had no communication with Mr. Kinsley whatsoever."

Thus the situation rested today, with the executive members of the committee scheduled to meet here tomorrow at the call of Chairman Houston.

In most quarters the expectation prevails that Houston will announce his retirement after considerable persuasion by his colleagues. Houston himself refuses to deny or affirm that he will resign. He answers all question with: "I have nothing to say."

Pressure for the removal or resignation of Houston has been acute among party leaders since the senate lobby committee turned up his lobbying activities in behalf of the Union Carbide Company, which sought control of Muskie Shoals, and the revelation that Houston temporarily diverted funds he received in this work to his private brokerage account in New York.

Threats of blackmail drove him to murder, Andrew Steffen, 43, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., heir of a wealthy lumberman, declares as he sits in his cell facing murder charges as a result of shooting Mrs. Irene Harder, above, in an alleged blind pig apartment in Detroit, police say. He asserts Mrs. Harder broke up his home and caused him to waste his fortune on her.

WEALTHY GIRL DIES IN FALL FROM HORSE

LAKE BLUFF, Ill., July 9.—Hurled from a runaway saddle horse on her father's estate, Helen B. Blair, 17-year-old daughter of William McCormick Blair, wealthy Chicagoan, was dead here today.

The horse, a high-spirited hunter, broke away from two grooms while the girl was mounting it late yesterday. The animal crashed through a barbed wire fence and threw Miss Blair to the ground. She died two hours later of concussion of the brain. The girl was to make her debut next fall.

LONE EAGLE, JR.

INGLEWOOD, N. J., July 9.—The name, if you please, is Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr. Suspense over the selection of the name of the son born to Colonel and Mrs. Charles Augustus Lindbergh passed today following official announcement at the home of the child's grandfather, Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, that he would be named for his famous father.

The baby was born June 22, the twenty-fourth birthday of his mother, the former Anne Morrow.

Mrs. Lindbergh was expected to leave shortly with her son to spend the summer at the Morrow summer home at North Haven, Me.

American Woman Is Drowned As Rescue Within Grasp

(BULLETIN)
STRALSUND, Germany, July 9.—Two American travelers, Miss Ruth Northrup of Philadelphia and John Burkholder of New York lost their lives when a disabled German Lufthansa hydro-airplane bound from Stettin to Norway capsized in the Baltic sea, it was learned here today.

Identification of the two Americans, who were among the five who were lost when the plane capsized, was made following a prolonged investigation which started when an air line official remembered examining the passports of two American passengers.

BERLIN, July 9.—A graphic description of the drowning of a woman passenger, believed to be an American, when a disabled Lufthansa hydro-airplane capsized in the Baltic Sea, was given to the police of Stralsund today.

The informant was the captain of a Baltic vessel which aided in the rescue of some of the passengers when the crippled plane turned turtle. Latest reports said five persons were lost, including a Miss Northrup and a Mr. Burkholder, both Americans.

The plane was forced down by engine trouble while enroute from Stettin to Kalmar, Sweden.

The captain of the steamer said he came upon the scene of the wreck and saw a woman, buoyed up by a lifebelt, fighting the waves near the disabled plane.

The crew of the vessel grappled for the woman with a boat-hook, and finally succeeded in attaching it to her life-belt. As she was being hauled aboard, however, the life belt broke and she sank immediately.

According to officials of the Lufthansa, Miss Northrup was the only woman passenger aboard the plane. No record was made of her residence, but officials distinctly remembered handling her passport. She was described as blonde and about twenty-five years of age.

Conflicting reports were current concerning the fate of the craft and its passengers. While it was stated in some quarters that five of the eight passengers and crew had been lost, another report declared all aboard the plane had been rescued by the Dutch steamer Spes, a vessel having no wireless equipment.

In the meantime, four German destroyers and a Swedish motor cutter continued their search for the missing plane.

HEARING OF CHARGE POSTPONED MONTH

COLUMBUS, O., July 9.—Matthew W. Stutson, 82-year-old mayor of West Jefferson, today was still awaiting a hearing on charges of misconduct in office after witnesses for the prosecution failed to appear for a hearing which was scheduled for yesterday. The date of the hearing has been moved up to August 18 by Gov. Cooper.

When witnesses for the prosecution failed to appear, a postponement of the hearing was requested by Attorney Charles Williams, special counsel of the attorney general's office. Stutson's attorneys vigorously protested the continuance.

A petition charging Stutson with drunkenness and inefficiency in office was submitted to Gov. Cooper a few weeks ago by residents of West Jefferson.

AUSTRALIA ADDS DUTY ON IMPORTS

LONDON, July 9.—Announcement of a 1 1/2 per cent primage duty of all imports was made by Premier Scullin in Australia in his budget speech to parliament today. It was stated in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Canberra.

The premier also announced increased customs on gasoline, films, newspaper, radio tubes and cigars, cigarettes and tobacco.

GIVES LIFE TO SAVE GIRL JUMPER

The first parachute jump of Miss Mary Fahney, 18-year-old society girl of Oak Park, Ill., resulted in a close call from death for herself and cost the life of her friend, Bruno Schastek, former German war ace and expert balloonist.

When she jumped over La Grange, Ill., her chute became entangled in the plane. She dangled in the air for nearly two hours while efforts were made to release her parachute. Then Schastek went up in another plane and let himself down to Miss Fahney on a knotted rope. As he reached the girl her parachute loosened itself and she floated safely to earth. Schastek, exhausted, tried to climb back the rope, then fell 600 feet to the ground. Miss Fahney and Schastek are shown here.

FOUR PERSONS DROWNED AS BOAT IS CAPSIZED

GREEN BAY, Wis., July 9.—Stories of the eight survivors were obtained today as authorities sought to learn what capsized a motorboat eighteen miles north of here last night, causing the death of four persons.

Because the lake was calm in the vicinity of Point Comfort where the accident occurred investigators were unable to assign a reason for the drownings. Twelve persons, most of them children were hurled into the water when the ship foundered. The boat was returning from a picnic excursion.

The dead were: Alice Worder, 11; Edwin Haase, 10; Raymond Raymaker, 8, and Julia Zellner, 12. Six children and two adults were taken from the water alive.

Groups of resort dwellers assisted coast guardsmen in rescue work and in recovering the bodies.

FRENCH FLIER
TRIES RETURN
OCEAN FLIGHT

Attempts West To East
Crossing To Africa

NATAL, Brazil, July 9.—Jean Mermoz, returning to France via Dakar, West Africa, was well out to sea on a non-stop flight across the South Atlantic ocean today after a take-off from here yesterday afternoon.

The French flier had passed over St. Paul Rocks, nearly 500 miles north of here on schedule.

He must pass over more than 1,700 miles of open ocean before he reaches the African coast with his flying boat.

He will be the first flier to make the west to east crossing of the Atlantic over that area.

Radio reports from his plane indicated that all was well.

POLICE RESIST MOB

BOMBAY, July 9.—One person was killed and a dozen were wounded when police fired on a riotous mob at Gudiatham today, according to dispatches reaching here.

BANK BANDITS ABANDON AUTO NEAR OSBORN; STILL AT LARGE

As much as the thugs were seen in St. Marys, O., Tuesday afternoon, asking the director of the closest hospital, authorities still believe them to be in this vicinity.

Farmers living on the Sand Hill road, near Osborn, informed investigators that they heard the roar of two motors early Tuesday. Then both cars stopped and one of them was set afire. The other car sped away. The burned machine was later identified beyond doubt as the bandit car. Bullet marks on the side of the machine were visible. The car was towed to a Fulton garage at Osborn. It was believed to have been stolen in Dayton.

POLICE COMPELLED TO ATTACK RIOTERS WITH MACHINE GUNS

Mansura Scene Of Uprising Staged By Wafdists

CAIRO, July 9.—Six persons were dead and nearly fifty were injured and receiving medical treatment at Mansura today, according to official reports, after riots between police and Wafdists.

Police were compelled to use machine guns and fixed bayonets to quell the rioters.

Wafdists made repeated attempts to capture and lynch policemen to avenge the death of four of their number. Two policemen were killed.

The riot at Mansura, a Wafdist stronghold in Egypt, was started when the former Premier Mustafa Nahaas Pasha sought to dash through protecting police lines in a motor car. He had been ordered confined to his house under police protection until safe transportation to Cairo could be arranged.

The executive council of the Wafdist party, of which Nahaas Pasha is the leader, had called a party meeting at Mansura despite warnings against it by police.

Sidky Pasha, representing the government, ordered the meeting to disperse. He was backed by police and troops who had been sent to help him. As the crowd booted Sidky Pasha, Nahaas Pasha attempted to get through the lines.

Troops and police were ordered to disperse the mob by force and they fired twelve rounds into the crowd.

Two police who died on duty were reported to have been stoned to death.

DRYS PESSIMISTIC
OVER PROHIBITION
CHERRINGTON SAYS

Says Organizations Are
Only Keeping Law
Alive

WASHINGTON, July 9.—The series of shocks dealt prohibition in the past year—the Literary Digest poll, the Morrow victory in New Jersey, both parties in the state of Washington declaring for repeal in their platforms, to mention only a few—has caused some of the dry leaders here to view the future with considerable pessimism.

Frank recognition that the situation is not as the dry organizations would have it, even with the transfer of enforcement to the department of justice and the undoubted efforts of the administration to tighten up, was made today by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, and one of the able lieutenants of the late Wayne B. Wheeler in the long fight to put the eighteenth amendment into the constitution.

In a remarkably blunt statement, Dr. Cherrington declared that prohibition is only being kept alive by the dry organizations.

"Prohibition," he said, "would be erased from the constitution and quickly blotted out from the statute books if the organized efforts of its friends should cease."

"Should the friends of prohibition abandon those organizations through which alone they present an effective front to the enemy, the liquor consumption in this country would unquestionably far exceed any record set in the past."

FIVE INJURED AS PIER FALLS

PENNS GROVE, N. J., July 9.—Five persons were suffering from injuries and property damage was estimated at close to $500,000 today due to the collapse last night of the Wilson Liner pier on the Delaware River across from Wilmington.

The roof-covered pier suddenly crashed into high tide waters and first reports were that several persons had been drowned. A checkup today indicated, however, there were no deaths.

Two of the injured were seriously hurt and removed to a hospital in Salem, N. J.

RIOTS RESULT FROM DEPORTING CUBANS

HAVANA, July 9.—Police reserves were patrolling the streets along the Havana waterfront today after a riot which broke out among 300 dock workers yesterday afternoon when ten persons for deportation were taken on board the Spanish steamer Marques De Comillas.

The deportees were accused of Communism.

Water front workers carried banners which read "Down with Yankee imperialism."

Four were slightly injured in clashes with police.

BUILDING BURNS

WEST JEFFERSON, O., July 9.—A blaze, believed to have started in a clogged pipe of an incinerator, today had completely destroyed the West Jefferson Elevator Company building here. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

Firemen fought the blaze for two hours before they had it under control.

Famous Connoisseur Grades Beauty

Russell Patterson, Noted Artist, in Special Interview, Awards Highest Points to Grace Coupled with Charm.

CATHERINE DALE OWEN

By ALICE ALDEN

Just what is beauty? Like love it is the most fragile, the most ethereal element in the world, and yet since man was first dazzled by the loveliness of woman, the world has endeavored to analyze beauty, to reduce it to a formula. Can it be done? Maybe, by scientists and writers, but not by artists. And yet it is only by seeing beauty through the unbiased eyes of art, that we can learn to construe or define it.

Talk to an artist about beauty, and you will find that there is surprisingly little he can tell you about it. Yet his views are more illuminating, more revealing than any man who ever fancied himself a connoisseur of feminine pulchritude. There is one artist, famous for his drawing of beautiful girls, who thinks that the layman who sets himself up as an arbiter of beauty is the world's supreme egotist. That artist is Russell Patterson, who works in a studio that is a fitting background for the glamorous process of beauties who have paused in their triumphant march long enough to be immortalized by his rich talent.

As far as Russell Patterson is concerned a girl's face is not her fortune. For on points he would award the face only twenty-five points, reserving the balance for figure, line, carriage, grace, movement and posture. Grace, to Patterson, is beauty, grace, coupled with that indescribably wonderful attribute that we know as "charm." Features are not important, it is the coloring that counts, the eyes, the hair and the contrasting complexion and quality of the skin. Beauty, insists the famous artist, is given out, and points in proof to several of his most famous models who by contrast with the colorful girls one sees everywhere are comparatively colorless and interesting. Girls whom the average man would not even find interesting, Patterson finds wonderful and even supremely beautiful. For they are girls able to create the impression of beauty—the most important thing of all.

LOVE ADDS TO CHARM Patterson tells of the most beautiful and perfect model he ever employed who could instantaneously suggest a Cleopatra or a little stenographer washing her hair to get that "golden glint" to dazzle the latest boy friend. The girl was not beautiful, yet she gave out a series of beautiful poses and pictures that delighted the world after she had been seen through the quizzical eyes of the artist. Suddenly the girl became drab, uninteresting and indifferent. Adroit questioning revealed the secret of her infatuation for a man not interested in her. When the infatuation died, then beauty and charm came back. For the girl was again giving out herself—her real beauty to the world instead of diverting it to one person. The average pretty woman is of course infinitely more attractive when she is in love, but Patterson contends that it is because hers is not the real beauty, only a superficial prettiness. And prettiness is the easiest attribute to be found in the world today. And beauty, by the same measure, consequently has become the rarest.

Blonde or brunette, which is the most beautiful. The average man may again have very decided opinions about this agitating question, but not Russell Patterson, who says that he draws and paints lovely women beauty is not enough and Patterson has one word of advice to women who would be beautiful and who spent their lives chasing beauty. "Strive to be decorative," he advises. "Refuse to strive for beauty of the standardized type, whether the beauty be that of a movie queen or professional breaker of masculine hearts. Strive to be beautiful in the eyes of those who love you and your quest for beauty will be a successful one." For the old adage that "beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder" is more true than ever today, with beauty on sale in almost every shop and department store.

It is usually awfully hard to pin down an artist to deliberately select type, whether the beauty be that of a movie queen or professional breaker of masculine hearts. But Russell Patterson has definite opinions on this quite important matter.

ELUSIVE, ETHEREAL TYPE To him Catherine Dale Owen is the most beautiful blonde and petite Lily Damita represents beauty of the elusive, ethereal type—the rarest type of all, according to many artists. Both of these girls, says Patterson, are absolutely unconscious of their beauty, and both have cultivated many other qualities, including charm and vivacity. For in a world of

FIRST PRISONER SENT TO DAYTON

The first Greene County prisoner was admitted to the Dayton Workhouse Tuesday since the new contract entered into between County Commissioners and the workhouse became effective last June 20. Leslie Ball, sentenced by Probate Judge S. C. Wright to pay a fine of $10 and costs and serve a sentence of six months on a non-support charge, enjoyed the dubious distinction of being the first prisoner from this county to be removed to the workhouse. For the last several years local prisoners have been incarcerated at the Cincinnati Workhouse.

NOTICE To Lot Owners Woodland Cemetery

The Woodland Cemetery Ass'n calls the attention of lot owners to the fact that the dry weather is seriously damaging flowers in urns. An annual charge of $1.00 is made for watering each urn. This service cannot be rendered unless payment is made in advance.

GAZETTE GOLF TEAM BRINGS CUP BACK HOME TO ROOST

Xenia Gazette employees may not be able to play softball, but they can teach the Middletown Journal staff a few points about golf.

This was proven Tuesday evening when a four-man golf team representing the Gazette defeated a team from the Journal, an affiliated newspaper, in a challenge match over the Community Club course, Dayton.

As a result of the victory a silver loving cup which is the symbol of athletic supremacy between the two organizations, was returned to the Gazette. The Xenia paper won the cup originally at basketball, and then lost it to Middletown in a softball game played here two weeks ago.

J. A. Chew, J. F. McLaughlin, William King and Phil Frame composed the Xenia team that defeated the Journal team composed of E. S. Myers, Bert Lawler, Kuenezel and Sherry over the Community Course Tuesday afternoon. The match was followed by a dinner for more than thirty employees at the Old Barn Club later, which was featured by much speechmaking for which Bert Lawler acted as toastmaster, William O. Giesman, circulation councillor for both papers, presented the cup to Mr. King, captain of the Xenia team.

Several staunch citizens of Six Mile Turn and vicinity came to town and claimed that a light frost covered the gardens in that neighborhood on the Fourth of July. No damage was done by the frost, it was said.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

SAVED BY GRACE—For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.—Eph. 2:8-10.

MUSCLE STILL NEEDED

The idea has become prevalent among young men, that they do not have to use their muscles any longer in earning a living. They expect to earn their bread by the smartness of their brain power. That is all right, provided they have the grey matter which can be trained to the requisite degree of efficiency. But the world still needs a lot of muscle.

Take, for instance, the report that there is an acute demand for workers on lumbering operations in the great woodlands in the state of Maine. The lumbermen of that section, it is said, are unable to obtain full crews, at a time when people in the cities still complain of unemployment. Probably in many regions where lumbering is carried on, there would be equal difficulty in obtaining workers.

Machinery has saved a lot of toilsome hand labor. But the farmers call for men who are not afraid of muscular work. A small army of men have to be employed as movers, to move household goods for the great number of families who are changing their residence. Expressmen and baggage handlers still have to handle their heavy loads. There are plenty of tasks that call for muscle.

Since the muscular work is unpopular, it will probably be fairly well paid. A man who is strong and powerful can look for regular work. The boys show a very powerful muscle as they throw the hammer at the track meets. They can't claim they are not capable of performing these tasks.

The man who uses his muscle is not necessarily debarred from promotion. He learns how all these manual tasks should be done. If he has any power of leadership or organization, he should be able to get a job as a boss or owner of business. A lot of young fellows could do worse than go on some good job that calls for muscle.

POLITICAL ACTIVITY

The average voter is not conscious of any great political activity at this time. But the politicians are working every week in the year. The average voter wakes up a week or two before election, if he arouses from his apathy at all, and then he wonders why it is that people of his type do not have a greater influence.

Instances can be cited where certain leading men have had a very large popular following, but where they could not win any elections or primaries, because the sentiment in their favor had not been organized. The voters may attack the so-called bosses and machines all they want to, but unless some such power is doing the work of organization, the parties or the ideas in which people are interested will never get anywhere.

Summer heat may be at its apex, but with the November election in view, the politicians are busy circulating around among their lieutenants. They gather at cattle shows and picnics, grasping the hands of the voters with hearty manner and inquiring about their relatives.

Some dignified aspirants may dislike such campaigning. But it has to be done. People want to know what a candidate looks like, and whether he has any human feeling. If he can't shake hands as if he liked people, they fear he is not interested in their interests. It may be a superficial attitude, but it is human nature.

These aspirants should not be lavish with their promises. When they pledge offices and favors to a lot of supporters, they are pledging something that may not be theirs to give. The people want the goods delivered in the form of efficient and low cost government. If they are tied up with pledges and promises, they will fall down on this requirement, and all their smiles will be wasted.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

SELF-RESPECT

One of man's most powerful motives for conduct is self respect. If the sense of self-respect is strong it does more to promote and maintain good behavior than the more vague feeling of "moral responsibility." The loss of self-respect is final. One then drops into a dismal world, where nothing can ever matter. There are men so liberal they care little for law or conventions, but their self-respect holds them on a healthy level. A course of lectures on this subject might be a strong addition to the course in any high school or college.

NEED TO GROW UP

Moral maturity is what America needs, according to Chancellor Brown, New York university. We need maturity, to grapple with prosperity. It might be added that we need it also to grapple with poverty. Women, who know men better than they know themselves, say that men are only little boys grown tall. Most of us are little boys in our minds. We want what we want when we want it, without logic and without reason. Real maturity means a grown-up mind. It is a hard plant to grow. It needs a great deal of hard work, study, cultivation.

THINKING ALONE

L. E. Ross, California man, shoves off in a 35-foot sailboat to cruise the South seas for two years. "I want to bask upon the shores of strange islands," he says. He travels alone. He will go to Australia, the Fiji Islands, Java Singapore, China. His friends, in the rut of daily jobs and responsibilities, will follow him in imagination. Perhaps his greatest opportunity is the chance to think. He may think things through, think them out for himself. No time to think for most of us here. Too busy by day, too tired by night. More South sea thinking, following leisurely action, might help us personally and governmentally.

WHEN ARE YOU HAPPY?

College graduates are always being told that college days are happiest. They should realize, so they are advised, that they will never be so carefree and happy again. All of which is bad propaganda and not true. Youth is not so happy as age. Youth, with little sense of proportion, still unaware of what is important and unimportant, grieves deeply over trifles. So many little things, occurring so often, make youth miserable.

The after years, if lived with fair thoughtfulness, bring some sort of adjustment to life. Life, properly lived, goes up, not down.

MAKING BUSINESS

If we think a crash in the value of stocks makes bad business, hard times, depression, we haven't seen anything in comparison with what would happen if advertising ceased. The discontinuance of normal buying which would follow a sharp decrease in the volume of advertising would bring on a depression in business the like of which we have never known.

What are the world speed records for airplanes?

New records were established following the Schneider cup races in England last year by the flyers of the British team. Major A. H. Orlebar flew the supermarine S6 over a three-kilometer course twice in each direction at an average speed of 355.80 miles per hour. Sept. 10, 1929. His fastest single flight was at the rate of 368.80 miles an hour. On Sept. 12, 1929, in the same plane, Major Orlebar raised the record to 357.70 miles per hour.

Slave Prices

For what price were slaves sold at the time of the Civil war?

The price of a slave at the time of the Civil war varied as much as any other commodity would. An old and decrepit slave would be almost worthless, while a young, bright, able-bodied slave would bring as much as $1,000. In some cases a young attractive female would bring even more.

Light Standards

What is the difference between candlepower and watt?

Candlepower is the illuminating power, as of a lamp or gas flame, reckoned in terms of the light of a standard candle. Watt is the practical unit of electric power, activity, or rate of work, equivalent to 10.7 ergs or 1 joule per second, or approximately 1/746th of a horsepower.

History of Golf

Where and when did golf originate?

This sport, generally identified with Scotland, originated in Holland and was known as golf, gouff, or gowff, from which the name golf was derived. It was first played in 1457 and after some years became well known in Scotland, where, in 1754, the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of Saint Andrews was founded. This became the center of the old world golf and has continued to be foremost in the world of golf. In the middle of the nineteenth century the game was introduced into this country, where it struggled along until after the World war, when it suddenly came to public favor and since that time has grown to be one of the most popular games in the country, there being millions of golfers today.

Removing Mildew

How can I remove mildew from a garment?

If the mildew is fresh it probably can be washed off with cold water. If not fresh you may be able to bleach it with potassium permanganate.

If the new tariff included a tax on golf trophies, your old friend "Bobby" Jones would have been bankrupt the other day when his ship from England bumped into its New York dock.

Incidentally, the Maestro of the Mashie objects to being referred to as "Bobby." Just why, he doesn't make clear.

To be affectionately hailed the world over by a nickname as colorful and full of character as "Bobby," shouldn't cause anyone to balk.

However, a man's prejudice may not be worth much, but, at least, it's worth respecting. So, from now on, it's Robert Jones.

FAUX PAS

Speaking of "Bobby"—or, that is, Mr. Robert Jones, of Atlanta, Ga., recalls the time, a couple of years back, when he returned from Scotland wearing a laurel wreath in place of a hat, and New York gave him one of its characteristic receptions in a parade up Broadway, from the Battery to City Hall.

In the procession the Street Cleaning Department was represented by a band, whose leader, learning that Brother Jones hailed from Atlanta, made a valiant stab at the appropriate by striking up the spirited strains of "Marching Through Georgia."

And the funny part of it was, the Street Cleaning Band walked directly in front of the automobile in which Jones was riding, and they played the piece half way through before one of Grover Whalen's lieutenants was able to smother it.

HERE'S A NICE PICTURE OF CIVIC VIRTUE, BUT THE BACK-GROUND RUINS IT

VICE PRESIDENT CURTIS PRESENTS SHARP CONTRAST TO PREDECESSOR IN HANDLING OF UPPER CHAMBER

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Among other high functionaries of the government to whom congress' adjournment brings a period of much needed rest is the Hon. Charles Curtis of Kansas, vice president of the United States.

Vice President Curtis has been on the job almost continuously for nearly 15 months. It has been no such uninteresting grind for Speaker Longworth, at the representatives' end of the Capitol building, as the Kansas has been through at the senate's end, where he presides.

THE TARIFF BILL is the piece of legislation which has kept Vice President Charles Curtis swinging his gavel so persistently.

Due to their congressional branch's hard-and-fast rules, the representatives disposed of this measure in short order; then left a mere corporal's guard of their number in Washington to maintain the semblance of a session, while the rest of them went where they pleased for weeks at a time. Speaker Longworth was gone all last summer. With scarcely anything to do, an understudy was able to act for him as well as not.

But while the representatives loafed, the senators (the regulars versus the coalition) were fighting over the bill like cats and dogs.

VICE PRESIDENT CURTIS takes his position, as senate umpire, seriously.

For one thing, he likes it. The duties (or rather, perhaps, the lack of them) got on Vice President Dawes' nerves. He never reconciled himself to the idea that the senate is a "deliberate body." Indeed, its deliberations were just what irked him worst—as entirely too deliberate, he thought. Action was what Dawes craved. Words bored him almost to death. Maybe he would have been more sympathetic toward senate procedure if ever he had any senatorial experience of his own, but he never had.

On the other hand, Vice President Curtis was a veteran of 20 years on the senate floor before the gavel passed into his possession.

Parliamentary tactics interest him intensely. He understands and has practiced them, for all they can be made to accomplish, as leader of the senate majority. He sees their purpose, follows them alertly; it with a census enumerator, in making clear his status as an American citizen.

It's the irony of fate that a man whose life work consists in reducing to the commonplace as intricate a philosophy as the Christian dispensation should come a cropper in the same matter of clearly expounding so prosaic a thing as his citizenship.

It would seem that the more education we acquire, the greater the difficulty we experience in mastering the gentle art of simple recital.

I recall, when I was a youngster, learning to ride a bicycle. I sought light from a rough neck acquaintance regarding the principle of remaining erect on two wheels. "Keep your feet a-goin', kid," he told me.

As I've thought many times since that an entire college of scientists couldn't have achieved a simpler or more succinct exposition.

shows in his face as he rules on a fine-haired point or technicality.

The very maneuvering that most irritated Dawes, Curtis loves.

THE VICE PRESIDENT is not exactly autocratic.

As amiable an individual as ever lived, the adjective "autocratic," in fact, does not fit him at all.

Nevertheless he speaks with an expert's authority. He knows, he knows that he knows and he has mighty little inclination to hearken long to any contrary argument, once he has expressed his official opinion.

"The senator will take his seat," and "wham" sounds the gavel—is Vice President Curtis' summary method of dealing with insurrection.

Oh yes; he can be positive.

AT THE SAME TIME, the Kansas accords the senate its full dues, too.

Vice President Dawes, as history records, tried to lecture the senators and got himself laughed at. Subsequently he became quite popular but he never fully lived down the senate's tendency to snicker at the thought of his first day in office, the "hell 'n' Maria" speech with which he celebrated it and the entire absence of results which it ever produced.

Vice President Curtis would be incapable of such a faux pas.

No one could be stricter than he in observance of the tacit rule that the senate presiding officer's function is to preside and say nothing whatever that at duty does not absolutely require of him.

BUT PERHAPS the most striking difference between Dawes and Charles Curtis in the vice presidency lies in the circumstance that the general always gave the impression of considering the post not quite equal to his merits, whereas the Kansas manifestly is immense. ly proud of it.

"Pooh on the vice presidency!" was Gen. Dawes' attitude—really making it seem rather petty.

Vice President Curtis, very frankly prizing his position as a high honor, gives it dignity and distinction. Moreover, he knows his business. In his hands, it is a well managed vice presidency; and that adds to its credit.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Spinach and Scrambled Egg
Toasted Raisin Bread
Mixed Vegetable Salad
Raspberries Sugar Cookies
Lemonade or Milk

This is another hot weather menu with one hot dish that is not too heavy. Toasted raisin bread is delightful served crisp with the spinach and egg dish.

Today's Recipes

Spinach Scrambled Eggs—For each serving use: One egg, salt and paprika to taste, one tablespoon milk, one-half teaspoon butter, two tablespoons chopped, seasoned spinach. Mix the egg lightly, add the seasonings, milk and butter. Turn into a hot, buttered frying pan and cook over a moderate fire stirring constantly with a fork. As the egg begins to thicken add the spinach, which should be carefully drained before measuring. Stir to a light, creamy mass. This dish may be prepared in five minutes.

Sugar Cookies—One cup granulated sugar, one scant cup butter, two eggs, eight teaspoons milk, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream of tartar, flour to make a soft dough. Roll thin and bake in moderate oven.

COOL AND REFRESHING

COFFEE FRAPPE (Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

One-half cup finely ground coffee, one egg white, slightly beaten; one-half cup cold water, three and one-half cups boiling water, one cup sugar. Mix the coffee, egg and cold water, add the boiling water and bring to boiling point. Boil two minutes. Let stand in a warm place 10 minutes, then strain add sugar and cool. Freeze without stirring to a mush. Pack in ice and salt, using one part ice to four parts salt. Serve in tall glasses with whipped cream sweetened and flavored with a little vanilla. The coffee should be freshly ground and strong, to give a decided coffee flavor.

Give Child Ice Cream For Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

HOT OR COLD, children must eat—ICE CREAM.

(NOTE: The following is an article I ran last summer, and as it is just as appropriate for this summer, I'm running it today, for I'm pressed for time. I will tell you why tomorrow.)

During the intense heat of the summer, there is a little lessening of the needs for energy foods, in both children and adults. This is shown by the decrease in the appetite. The energy food needs are lessened, because, first, there is a lessened inclination for active play or exercise, and, second, with the surrounding air very warm, there is no stimulation for the body to produce extra heat to keep its normal temperature. BUT we mustn't lose sight of the fact that, hot or cold, a child needs a lot of food.

The foods which may be decreased during the hot weather are the foods which are eaten mainly to produce energy and heat—the starches, sugars and fats. The child's needs for vitamins, mineral elements and protein are not reduced one iota from what they are during cold weather.

Not infrequently the child's disinclination to eat during hot weather is observed to such an extent that he loses weight and has his resistance undermined. There is one food that children won't object to eat freely of, and that's ice cream. Now here's where I make a million warm little friends.

Give it to them once a day, twice a day, three times a day, four times a day, if they want it. Always, of course, with the knowledge that it is pure, and taken after they have had the other foods they need—their green vegetables and fruit and whole grain breads and cereals, a small amount of protein in eggs, cottage cheese or fresh food. If you let them have good amounts of ice cream, then you can cut out some of their butter, and some of their plain cream, and as much milk as would be supplied by the ice cream. (Ice cream is a good way to get milk into those children who don't like it.)

too? 'Es! If it is at the age when it is having other foods besides its milk—at five or six months. In very tiny tastes, of course, so it is thoroughly warmed before it reaches the tummy. Of course, you must be doubly sure of its purity! If you're not, make it yourself of pasteurized milk and cream.

Ice cream is one little grand food. For young and old, sick and well. Why? Because it is made of milk and cream (and of course sugar). We have long known that ice cream is an excellent food, but now comes some experimental work which indicates that it is even better than we thought. This work was conducted in the animal nutrition laboratory of the National Dairy Company, in Forest Lake, Minn., and reported in the June, 1929, number of the American Journal of Public Health.

The animals used were albino and piebald rats, and the ice cream used was standard commercial vanilla ice cream and was manufactured especially for the experiment. One group of rats used as a "control" were fed the normal diet without ice cream. Another group received liberal amounts of ice cream, even to the extent of one-third of the entire weight of the diet. The ice cream babies grew more normally, and gained in weight much more rapidly than those that hadn't received any of the ice cream.

Use Imagination to Aid Happiness

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

IN A RECENT sermon I heard a minister say that more marriages have gone on the rocks, not from lack of love, but through lack of imagination. Without the ability to put oneself in another's place and imagine how she would feel, one is likely to hurt another person incalculably.

Such imagination gives one the power to see just how hurt they may be by our acts as well as words, of disloyalty. And, too, it may give us a bit of insight into why our mates act as they do. We may see, through the power of imagination, where we fail them, and what their reactions are to our personalities.

"DEAR VIRGINIA: If you insulted a boy, would you tell him you were sorry? My temper got the better of me at the time and I just said what I thought. I AM sorry, but I don't know if I should tell and good manners."

Why not, Wondering? Surely if a boy had said unkind things to you when in a rage you would expect him to apologize, so why not treat him as you would like to be treated? That's good Christianity and good manners.

DOUBTFUL LOVER: It is odd that the boy doesn't ask you for a date when he shows in other ways that he likes you and he knows you say, that you like him. If you feel that you might be able to forget him if you did not accept his invitations to ride and dance, and would, therefore, be happier, why refuse them? I honestly think that if he cared a great deal for you, dear, he would visit you at home and ask for your company. He evidently considers you a rather casual acquaintance.

TWO SISTERS OF ASTORIA: I think it is a great pity your people don't believe you when you tell "certain things," but as to the rest: I wish that just this once you could go to a crystal gazer and look in the crystal and see yourselves 20 or 30 years from now, you'd probably see two mothers worrying about their daughters and pondering how to give them chances to have a good time and, of the same time, to get the rest and sleep they need when they want to be with the girl and boy friends. That is what your mother and father are up against, girls. They want to keep you sweet and innocent, happy and healthy—and it's the devil's own job—with you, all the time pulling against the barriers. Have a heart, girls. If anything happens to you—a mental, moral or physical breakdown—you would probably be first to blame your parents. Cooperate with them, instead of finding fault.

Take Walk After Work for Beauty

By GLADYS GLAD

MRS. HELEN WILLS MOODY recently propounded a solution for what I believe to be one of the biggest problems of the thousands of girls working in offices. This problem is the inability of such girls to obtain a sufficient amount of daily exercise.

Mrs. Moody, who is an ardent enthusiast of walking, suggested that these young women make a habit of taking an invigorating walk every evening after work hours. If possible, she advised, this exercise should be taken before dinner, and followed by a bath, tub or shower.

Try it, and notice the difference in your appetite. This is especially advisable for those of my readers who are shut up in close quarters all day, with only a short period of time for luncheon.

A few minutes of corrective exercise should be as much a part of the daily routine as tooth brushing is. The ideal time to do such exercises depends upon your constitution and general habits of living. For the majority of business women, exercise is most beneficial when taken in the morning, before breakfast. It stimulates the circulation, and makes the body feel gorgeously fit and ready for the day's work. However, if you are highly strung, run down, or lack vitality, vigorous exercise may take the first thing in the morning may do too much out of you. It may make you feel fatigued before the day has even begun. For you, the time for exercise is at the end of the day. It will relieve your nervous tension and will refresh and exhilarate you.

Put into practice Mrs. Moody's excellent suggestion. If possible, play a game of tennis or a round of golf before dinner. Or follow the pugilists' lead—buy yourself a length of clothesline and skip rope. If outdoor exercise is not possible, throw open your windows and exercise in a freshly-aired room for 10 minutes.

Regardless of the means employed, be sure to take your daily exercise. The greatest authorities agree that exercise is the surest, sanest and cheapest way of keeping young.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS FRAMED by Phil

Probably it was just as well, from the viewpoint of the Xenia Merchants, that Harvey Reese did not pitch as scheduled for the Dayton Grismers Coals against the local team in the opener of a three-game series last Sunday. It made no particular difference, however, as the Grismer outfit outclassed the Merchants, 6 to 2.

Reese, it developed, was signed Sunday morning to pitch for the Richmond, Ind., entry in the Central League, and made his debut that afternoon against the Dayton Aviators. For six innings he twirled perfect ball, retiring the first eighteen batters to face him in rotation. After standing the Aviators on their heads for six innings, he was picked for a triple by "Chuck" Weimer and a single in the seventh, robbing him of a no-hit, no-run performance. He won his game, however, 4 to 1.

The laugh was therefore on the Aviators because Reese, a Dayton man, had been hanging around the town all summer but was not considered good enough to pitch for the Dayton team.

Local fans had a glimpse of Reese several weeks ago here when he pitched the Grismer Coals to an 8 to 7 victory over the Merchants in a fifteen inning struggle.

The Grismer nine has been the special jinx of the Merchants this season. Jess Chambliss' boys won their first three games, then lost to the Coals. Having ended one winning streak, they began another then extended to six straight games before the Dayton nine again snapped it last Sunday.

Unless the Merchants beat the Coals next Sunday the series will end. Otherwise a third and deciding game will be played on the following Sunday.

The local team has been strengthened by the return of "Jug" Conley to his old station at second base. A few weeks ago Conley was released at his own request to play with the American Railway Express team at Dayton but he saw little action and returned to the Merchants last Sunday, getting a single and double.

Miniature golfing links, present fad throughout the country, are cluttering up Hollywood, Calif., to such an extent that they are becoming a real menace to theaters there. Would-be golfers are spending their evenings putting around these little courses instead of going to shows, it seems, and to combat the situation it is said that a few theater owners are now installing miniature courses of their own in the theater lobbies. This is no hoax.

LANGS WIN FROM PAINTERS IN STUBBORNLY-FOUGHT BATTLE

After offering stubborn resistance all the way and outtrotting the ultimate winners slightly, Graham Paints finally bowed to the inevitable and were nosed out by the Lang Chevrolet Co. softball team, 9 to 7 in a National League game at the athletic field Tuesday night.

The Lang nine, trailing for six innings, came from behind to win out with a four-run flurry in the seventh chukker. The co-league leaders were victorious because they made every hit count for a run.

Langs made only nine hits but they tallied a run for every hit they made. Grams obtained eleven hits but they had nine runs.

Langs evened the count in the last of the sixth, scoring twice. Smittle singled and L. Fuller tripled. When McCoy popped to second Fuller scored after the catch.

Graham assumed the lead again in the seventh, scoring a run on singles by Bice and Kersey and Milburn's sacrifice fly. But the advantage was only temporary as Langs uncorked a winning rally in the last of the lucky seventh after two batters had been retired. Successive singles by Davis, Smittle and L. Fuller, a walk to Gibney and a single by McCoy produced four runs.

Graham marked up their final run in the ninth on a single by Kersey, an out at first and a one-bagger by Muterspaw.

Smittle, Davis, L. Fuller and McCoy each obtained two hits for the winners and Kersey, Muterspaw and C. Cope did likewise for Graham.

The victory enables the Lang Chevrolets to again share the league leadership with Geysers.

Court play means what to do with the ball. "What to do" and "how to do it" are Siamese twins. Each must be practiced and studied separately to get proper perspective and relationship and, consequently, function.

When playing your shot, you do not need to know where your opponent is or what he is doing. Never watch him. Your eye should always be on the ball. Your opponent is nothing more than a convenient machine for returning the ball to you so you can make another perfect shot.

Determine to put every ball with a purpose to a chosen spot. Decide on this spot before your opponent has hit the ball back and no matter where the ball comes, stick to your choice.

You have from the back court four shots to choose from: on the forehand, 1, the crosscourt shot and the straight sideline shot; 2, on the backhand also, the crosscourt and straight sideline shots. Use these four shots to maneuver your opponent out of position so you may finish the point.

Be willing to play many shots before your opening comes, but be ready for your opportunity to clinch the point. Always sacrifice speed of shot for steadiness. At any cost keep the ball in play.

SPRINGFIELD TEAM TO MEET MERCHANTS SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Springfield Tramps and not the Dayton Grismer Fuels will meet the Xenia Merchants Sunday afternoon at Washington Park in what has all the advance earmarks of being one of the best games of the current diamond season.

The Tramps are considered one of the best semi-pro teams in this locality and boast a record this season of ten victories against only two defeats.

Thornhill, who covers center field, is the fastest and flashiest player on the squad and no catcher has yet been able to throw him out on an attempted steal of second. Maybe Mike Weller, Merchants' catcher, will have more success as he has the reputation of being a nemesis of base stealers.

Two of the hardest hitters in the lineup of the Tramps will be found in the infield with Compton and Ziegenthaler played third base and second, respectively. Both have batting averages of more than .375.

Ted Bausman, manager of the Springfield team, expects to send his hurling ace, Baldwin, to the mound Sunday against the Merchants. Baldwin has been averaging eight strikeouts a game and has not allowed more than seven hits in any single contest.

Modern Method

Lift Them Out CORN

Callouses Go Too

The safest and real modern way to remove corns, root and all—out to stay is soak them every night for 3 or 4 nights in an invigorating, stimulating Radox Footbath.

Then put on modish shoes again, walk and dance with greatest comfort because there's nothing left to ache. No pain, no trouble.

Radox liberates oxygen which softens hard outer layer of corn, each night penetrating further and further through the pores, carrying the salts to actual root of corn, so loosening it that it comes right out. Nothing like healthy, free from corn feet to assure happy days! Get a package of Radox at Sayre's Drug Store or any druggist.

SUSPECT HELD

Police are holding one youth for investigation in connection with what was described as an attempted robbery at the Greene County Hardware Co., E. Main St., Tuesday night. Bernard Sutton, salesman, who was in the store at the time, observed someone attempting to pry loose a tin covering nailed over a rear window, and notified police, who rounded up a suspect for questioning about midnight.

THE FEARFUL 7

A vicious gang of parasites... preying on humans... living in homes. You find them everywhere... no house immune... crawling, flying and hatching in kitchens, dining rooms, living rooms, bedrooms, closets. They sting, and bite, and contaminate... spread sickness, suffering... often cause death. Don't tolerate these merciless enemies to your comfort and health. Kill them quickly and easily with FLY-TOX. A fragrant, stainless spray. Dealers near your home sell FLY-TOX.

As yet, she had no proof of her innocence. Estelle had even died under an assumed name. The world would but laugh in derision at such a proclamation. She would only be opening a healing wound that would cause her untold suffering. Life must continue as before. She must carry on—bravely, determinedly—in the face of defeat.

Gregory glanced up inquiringly. The office boy stood in the door, much perturbed.

"Didn't I say that I didn't want to be disturbed for an hour?"

"Yes, sir, but a young gentleman here, wants to see you at once, sir."

"Send him in," resignedly.

Winfield was already behind the door, strode over to the desk in great agitation.

"Well, Win, I'm mighty glad to see you. Sit down. What's up? Another discovery?"

The boy ignored the proffered chair, swung one leg across the corner of the desk. "Discovery is right! Read that! Lord! but we're all idiots!" and he tossed an envelope toward his uncle, one that had evidently been much crushed in a clenched hand.

And as Gregory read the words scrawled on a sheet of cheap paper, his face went grey.

He read: "Hello, Boy. You can't guess who's writing unless you look at the end—"

When Winfield had read that far, he had indeed looked at the signature and ejaculated, "Estelle Kay!"

For gosh sake, what's on her mind," then returned to the beginning: This is my last will and testament, and it's all I can will to anyone—but it's worth a million dollars to someone you love. And I'm going to give it to her, but I need your help. So, boy, clean your glasses and listen well, I'm going to check out. Why, is my own business. Dee knows but she won't tell no one. And boy! don't you lose her. She loves you, but she won't give in long's things are against her."

"I know I'm going to die before you get this, so here goes. Dee didn't kill that brute, Moreau, I did, with my own gun. There was no other way. He wouldn't square with me. I had to do it."

"And now, after I'm gone—maybe a week, or maybe two, you will get this letter, and I demand one thing of you. Shout this from the house-tops—tell it to the world—or to a reporter, and that's the same. Give him a scoop. Tell him to write a long story about how circumstantial evidence don't go."

"Now, remember, when you get this, you can't hurt me for I'll be a million miles away, up among the stars out of reach of the law—not in this heartless world which even punishes the innocent ones. You will do this, I know, for her if you don't for me. And mind you, walk straight when you get the kid. There's nothing to the other thing. So long, Estelle Kay."

Gregory wiped the cold moisture from his face, the tears from his eyes. His hand, holding the letter, was trembling.

"Good God! And to think she might have been sent to the chair with our fool blundering. Defense!" he snorted disgustedly.

Winfield was pacing the floor. "And that's not the worst of it. We put her through just as much torture, and more, than any electric chair could inflict. That's over soon, mercifully. But we've all persecuted her day and night, for months. And she was innocent all the time. Nearly lost her own life to keep her honor, and then accused of a murder she knew nothing about," he groaned and sank miserably into a chair, his face in his hands.

Gregory broke the silence by blowing his nose violently. Well, my boy, it can't be helped, now. All we can do is to eat humble pie and make up for lost time. Where have you kept yourself, anyway? Must be two months since I last saw you."

"Yes, sir, I'm sorry, but I've been pretty busy, and been out of the city a lot. Now, I've swung a big deal, I feel free to treat myself to a little vacation. Just got the letter while I was packing. Intended to drop in to see you, anyway."

DAD'S GIRL
THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN
EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

CHAPTER 45

She was a boy late for work, but she had informed Mr. Randall that she might not get back that day. She went directly to the office, washed and freshened up a bit, and resumed her work. She felt as if she stood on the crest of a hill, cool, fragrant air blowing against her face and through her hair, pressing her eyelashes with a delicious caress, the sun warm on her, comforting healing.

Then an appalling thought swept all the joy from her as a hurricane sweeps over a picturesque, tree-dotted country and leaves desolation, shorn tree-trunks gaunt and stark and dead-white against an angry, furious sky.

She was freed of guilt—but the world would never know. She could never tell anyone who had killed Ivan Moreau. All her life, she must still bear that burden of guilt against the whole world of suspicion, scorn, neglect. All the glad hours swept away. Only in her own mind and heart could she know peace and assurance.

A voice tempted, mocked: "Why not tell the world that you are innocent. You can't hurt her now, and the world can't make her pay."

But she pushed the taunt from her. She was glad for her own peace of mind. Estelle had given her that much. She could not take more, because the girl was now helpless to defend her own name.

Besides—who would believe her? As yet, she had no proof of her innocence. Estelle had even died under an assumed name. The world would but laugh in derision at such a proclamation. She would only be opening a healing wound that would cause her untold suffering. Life must continue as before. She must carry on—bravely, determinedly—in the face of defeat.

Gregory glanced up inquiringly. The office boy stood in the door, much perturbed.

"Humph—well, it's slow enough for me," irritably.

Arrived in St. Louis, as soon as he had had a shower and change and had snatched a few bites of dinner in the grill room of his hotel, he commanded the driver of the taxicab to lose no time in taking him to Clara Dee's address.

In the apartment house lobby, he rang the bell over the names "Stacy—Forester," until the batteries must have burned out, but received no response. He had pressed his ear so hard against the speaking tube, that he felt a sharp pain dart through it when he drew it away, finally. He climbed back into the cab, reluctantly, and banged the door viciously.

The Theater

Who was it said the talkies would sound the death knell for the foreign actors and actresses—whose dialects would preclude the possibility of their appearance in American films?

What about Greta Garbo, who managed to contribute one of the finest talkies of the year? And what about Maurice Chevalier, who really is a product of the talkies? Every day it appears that those reasons who predicted bad weather for foreign film stars, spoke out of turn. Paramount has just signed Roberto Rey, the Spanish-French style hall favorite, for American picture. Rey is press-agent to be on the same general plan

Among the last to close was "Strike Up the Band" in which Clark and McCullough were starred. McCullough, you know, is almost a local boy his home being at Springfield.

Other screen salaries pale before the fabulous rate being paid Baby June Dwan Smith, now working in her first picture. The infant only gets $75 a day, but it only takes her twenty minutes to do a day's work. The State Industrial Welfare Committee forbids working June Dwan more than that. If she could do eight hours work at the same rate, the studio estimates she would receive $1,800 per day or $10,800 a week. And for a beginner, too!

MAURICE CHEVALIER

Chevalier. He sings tenor, initiates with his smile and endies his English with somewhat the same interesting accent Chevalier has.

The same studio has foreign acts as four of its topnotchers. Chevalier from France; Ernst Lilj, from Sweden; Marlene Dietrich, from Germany and Nino Martelli, from Italy. That continental set seems to be a commercial asset in the films. The use of foreign stars may do something to break down international barriers and eliminate provincialism in the theaters as these stars become successful.

The theater season is in its annual summer slump along Broadway, where legitimate houses are used and movie palaces beckon to per-beated pedestrians with blaring signs telling of the coolness of the interior.

The past theatrical season in Gotham, trembling under the first blow of the talkies, produced a standard of entertainment comparable with the best. Perhaps the arm spread by the talkies had something to do with the fact that a number of productions in New York were fewer but the quality higher. Of course there were the usual weak presentations, which lled as usual and were carted off to Limbo, but the majority of the productions that survived during the season, were high class offerings deserving of patronage. This applied also to the musical shows, several of which were well above par.

WHY DO I DRAW GIRLS?

Paul Robinson, Creator Of "Etta Kett," Tells Readers Of Gazette In This Interview

PAUL ROBINSON
Creator of "Etta Kett"

"Art marked me for its own at a tender age," says Paul Robinson, creator of the popular comic strip, "Etta Kett," an exclusive feature daily in the Gazette. "The mural decorations, I painted on my classroom. Halloween night, proved sensational. A special meeting of the school board was held and they voted unanimously that I was just wasting my time in their institution."

"Many times I am asked what course I took to become a cartoonist. For the benefit of those who are trying to become successful in this week, let me say that I took the course of least resistance. I had a hard time making the grade in school, but after college I sailed to Paris, where I studied anatomy and gained a great deal of experience."

Made Him Dizzy

"For a long time I produced animated cartoons, drawing for nearly all the large film corporations. In one year I worked for eight different companies. That was before the animated cartoon game was well stabilized, and the rapidity with which they opened up and closed down made me dizzy. Even to this day I am trying to break myself of the habit I formed in those days of working with my hat and coat on."

"Next, the humorous weekly field claimed my attention and from there I climbed the fence over into the newspaper field, where the grass looked 'long greener.' To make a long story less boring, I drew practically every kind of cartoon from sport to editorial, and at one time more than 1,800 newspapers were being served with my work."

Why Draw Girls?

"Of the 'several' comic strips I have drawn, I think 'Etta Kett' my supreme inspiration. She typifies in my mind the ideal girl of today and in her I try to mirror all the daring vivaciousness, all the sweetness and carefree abandon of the modern girl. With just a touch of satire, to be sure, but beneath her make-up, lovably human."

"Why do I draw girls? Because nothing interests me more than half so much, and certainly nothing is half so attractive to girls, as themselves. This is the age of youth, and the youth of today doesn't wait to be served; it serves itself."

"The Civil War freed the slaves, and from what I can see the World War freed the whole female sex. Yet this freedom is nothing to worry about; they are easily bridled."

Girls of Today

"Are girls of today different from those of yesterday? Very little. The only difference between the girl of this century and that of the eighteenth is that now she puts the powder on her face, which she used to put on her hair."

"As youth, wasn't I a devil? Yet today I'm a deacon in our church. Didn't my wife make her dear father bald and turn her dear mother prematurely gray? She sure did, yet today she sings in the choir. So do you think I intend to lose my beauty sleep worrying about my little flapper daughter's future? I'll tell the world I will."

RIDE IN THE NEW FORD

THE NEW FORD TUDOR SEDAN

Check up on comfort, safety, acceleration, ease of control, speed, power, reliability and economy and you will know that the new Ford is a value far above the price

WHEN you see the new Ford you are impressed instantly by its trim, substantial lines and beautiful colors.

As you watch it in traffic, on hills, and on the open road, you get some idea of its quick acceleration, its ease of control, and its speed and power.

In talking with owners and experienced mechanics you hear enthusiastic praise of its reliability and economy.

But only by driving the new Ford yourself can you fully appreciate the value that has been built into the car and its satisfactory all-round performance. You will particularly like its easy-riding comfort on bad roads and the safety of its fully enclosed four-wheel brakes.

See the nearest dealer, therefore, and have him take you for a demonstration ride in the new Ford. Select your own roads and plan to give it a severe test. Check up on every feature that goes to make a good automobile.

Then you will know, from your own experience, why so many millions of people the world over are buying Ford cars.
